Mrs. Carlisle's Reception - Personal Notes. Mrs. J. G. Carlisle of K street held her closing reception for the season at her home yesterday afternoon. She was attired in a handsome toilet of gray silk, the court train dged with broad bands of lynx fur, and extended a cordial greeting to every arrival. Mrs. Wm. Carlisle in red silk was also in the front of the house, and in the dining room were a score of pretty girls in demi-toilets and all busily engaged in entertaining the callers.

Among them were Miss Mattie Thompson of

THE WORLD'S FAIR COMMITTEE. They Adopt the Subcommittee's Bill With an Important Amendment.

The House committee on the world's fair held a meeting this morning and adopted the bill of the subcommittee with a few verbal changes and with an important amendment. This amendment consists of a provision for the appropriation of $1,500,000 for the erection of a building for government exhibits.

Mr. Frank of Missouri urged the importance of speedy action, and upon his motion a subcommittee was appointed, composed of Messrs. Candler, Hitt, Hatch and Wilson, and instructed to immediately frame and report to the full committee a bill providing for a scheme of procedure in the Ho ALIEN HEIRS IN THE DISTRICT. The Supreme Court Decides an Interest ing Point in a Will Case.

An interesting legal point was settled by the decision rendered by the Supreme Court Monday in the case of the estate of the late T. Lawrason Riggs, who died in 1888. Among the heirs were two children of Mrs. Geofroy, a sister of the deceased. These children were aliens, born under the French flag, and there was doubt whether they could legally inherit property in the District of Columbia. To determine their legal status, and the proper method of settling the estate, a friendly suit was instituted. The District Supreme Court decided that the children could not be treated as heirs, but the Supreme Court of the United States has reversed this decision. The case depended upon the interpretation to be given to the words "States of the Union" in the treaty made with France in 1853. The question was whether this phrase included the District of Columbia. The Supreme Court holds that the phrase. though loosely drawn, does include the Dis-trict. By the terms of the treaty the United States covenanted that French citizens should have the right to hold real estate and inherit property in states where the laws did not pro-hibit aliens from holding real estate, and prom-ised the good offices of the general govern-ment to secure the repeal of those alien land hibition did exist.

It is a well-recognized principle, the court says, that treaties are to be construed with reference to the purpose sought to be secured, and it holds that the United States would be put in a very inconsistent position if it were decided that it had covenanted to do its best in behalf of French citizens in states wherein it agree to do anything in the District of Columbia, where its power is unlimited.

EIGHTEEN DAYS WITHOUT FOOD. Eight Pelew Islanders Picked Up in a Cance 200 Miles From Land.

The American ship Joseph S. Spinney arrived at Hiogo, Japan, January 3, with six Pelew Islanders, whom she had picked up in an open canoe over 200 miles from land. November 23 seven men and their old king set out to pay a visit to a chief on another island of the Pelew group. Their craft was a dugout, 30 feet long, with only 15 inches beam. Before they could make their port of destination a gale sprang up and they were blown out to sea. They were without food or water. In this fearful condition they remained for eighteen days. December 11 the old king, faint with hunger and mad with thirst, decided that this boy, aged sixteen, must be killed in order that the others might live. Preparations for the sacrifice were nearly completed when the sails of the Spinney appeared on the horizon and the boy was saved.

The men when rescued presented a fearful sight. The king was so wasted that the chief mate carried him up the ship's gangway under his arm. Before reaching Hiogo the king and one other man died.

The six survivors are somewhat larger than the Japanese, have coppery skins, long flowing hair and spreading nostrils. They are tatooed from head to foot in gay colors. Their chief consolation is smoking. Each has a hole pierced in his ears, in wich he sticks his pipe when not

All of a sudden and while those on board were intently gazing at the first whale there was a splashing of the waters about thirty feet ahead of the schooner and on the starboard, and another whale was seen to throw his tail out of the water. Those on board were considerably alarmed at seeing a whale within such short range, but their alarm was greatly increased when his whaleship commenced spouting great streams high in the air. The vessel was hove to and as many as fifteen different whales were counted. At one time there ferent whales were counted. At one time there were two on both the starboard and port sides were two on both the starboard and port sides of the frail craft, and the herce way in which they lashed the waters caused her to rock considerably. The mate of the vessel wanted to shoot one of the largest of the whales, but those on board stoutly objected, fearing disastrous results if he were only wounded.

A Waste of Energy. From the Chicago Tribune.

From the Chicago Tribune.

A certain young Chicago lawyer—it is just as well not to give his name—was trying a case in a justice's court a few years ago. He was deeply interested in the case and most anxious to win it, so he put in a good deal of time looking up decisions bearing on the point, and when he made his speech cited case after case. He made the strongest speech he knew how to make and the justice listened to it all intently. When the young lawyer finished the justice leaned back in his chair and appeared to be considering the matter.

"We ought to win this," said the lawyer to his client, "but I'm a little afraid."

"You needn't be," replied the client calmly. "Tou needn't be," replied the client calmly. "Tou needn't have worked so hard either. I saw him this morning. He wanted fifty, but finally took twenty-five."

The justice, by the way, is not on the bench now.

The defense moved that the government elect on which count they would proceed, and this was The defendants having challenged two jurors left but eleven jurors in the box and the court adjourned till today.

This morning the trial was resumed imm diately after the vacancies in the jury panel had been filled. About 10:30 o'clock the two women came into court and the little girl of Mrs. Friday at once joined her mother. The child became quite pale and was evidently sick, but soon became composed and remained with her mother. The girl has been here about two weeks and has frequently visited her mother in

A JURY SELECTED.

The selection of a jury was at once proceede with and proved to be slow work. Nearly every juror called had heard of the case and some had formed an impression as to the guilt or innocence of the accused women, so it was with some difficulty that satisfactory jurors were procured. In the matter of challenges (the defense having ten and the government three) the defense made the point that they had ten for each charge—thirty on the indictment in

Mr. Lipscomb said if this was the law Silcott if brought to trial would be entitled to over 700 challenges.

The chief justice held that for the purportion of the of trial the counts should be considered as one charge, and therefore the defendant was entitled to but ten challenges.

At 12:30 o'clock the challenges of the defendants were exhausted, but to save the point another juror was challenged, but the challenge The defendants stated that they might make the point that with the list of jurors was the name of one the Commissioners should not have placed in the box, but would not press it now. The jurors selected are James O. Marceron, Wm. F. At 1:20 o'clock all the witnesses were excluded from the room and Mr. Lipscomb opened the case to the jury, stating that the defendants are charged with having December 11 stolen a sealskin coat worth $375 from Stinemetz & Son and jewelry from Harris & Shafer and jewelry from Galt & Co.; that they arrived on the night of Docember 10 and registered at the Howard house as Mrs. Clark and sister; that they went out the next morning, and the police having been informed that two shop-lifters were in town Detectives Raff and Carter located them, went to the hotel and arrested them there and found the stolen property; that one offered the officers sealskin coats for their wives if they (the prisoners) were allowed to go, but the proposition was rejected.

INDIAN NAMES

Waiters, Drivers, Coschmen, Maids, Servants of All Kinds with good references. THE NEW NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT OFFICE, 617 12th n.w. the legends were of three kinds, purely mythical, partially trustworthy and of real historic value. There are fifty-one names of gentes known, but of this number only thirty-eight have been corroborated and it is not likely that there were as many gentes as names, as it has been found that some of as names, as it has been found that some of the gentes have several names apiece. Most of the names arose from names of places the clans inhabited, as "the people of the place of water with a salty taste," "or people of the place of willows." These names, when given in one long Navajo, word are about as unwieldly as any the philologist ever has to deal with. Members of every Navajo gens are now scattered all over the Navajo territory, but they all retain to a the Navajo territory, but they all retain to a certain extent the gens feeling. The Navajoes are an exogamus people, that is to say they marry outside of their own clans, and with them the child belongs to the gens of the mother.

THE APACHE NAMES. Capt. John G. Bourke followed with an account of the gens names among the Apaches. He said that the close relationship of the Apaches and Navajoes was too well known to demand discussion. Of the gens names of the two races there are a large number that are analogous, and this parrellelism is very helpful as well as interesting to the student of Indian life and history. He told how when he was with Gen. Crook in pursuit of Geronimo and his band he was able to learn much of the Indian gens history by interviewing captive Indians.
The soldiers insisted upon every captive giving his gens name and relationship, giving them the impression that this facilitated the distinction of nation. All Apache names are topographical and never take their origin in names graphical and never take their origin in names of animals or plants. Polygamy is the rule among them. Men always marry women from another tribe, as this not only gives them a greater number of women in their clan and thus a greater number of beasts of burden, for an Indian woman is nothing more, but it also furnishes them with a band of spies familiar with the country of other class. with the country of other clans, a knowledge that may become valuable in case of war. When a Navajo comes among the Apaches to sell his blankets he is generally cared for by the clan that is related to his own unless he happens to have friends among them more congenial than
